BAM! Complete Guide to Conferences - Canada

Introduction

Conferences take place for different reasons and everyone involved in the performing arts has to decide which conferences are most valuable for their particular goals. A presenter may attend a conference to book part of or a complete season, attend workshops, re-connect with colleagues, and take in local attractions or any combination of the above. An agent will most likely attend to connect with presenters, have an exhibit booth, and/or present artists from their roster in showcases. An artist may be attending to try to get an agent, see how the conference works, and pick up some ideas on how to be successful or to showcase at the event. Whatever the reason, conferences are part of the overall investment in your work and you must be selective in terms of time and effort you can expend on conferences in general. Conferences are expensive to attend and it may take some time before you are able to realize a return on your investment. Attendance at a conference has many benefits:

• An opportunity to connect with colleagues

• An opportunity to learn about the industry

• An opportunity to showcase your talent (See BAM! Complete Guide to Showcasing)

• An opportunity to experience different cultures, events, geography, climate, architecture and more.

Choose which conference or conferences are best for you at any given time. Seek the advice of trusted colleagues who may have attended the conference to ascertain if it would be valuable for you to attend. Be prepared to get the most out of any conference you attend (see “How to Work a Conference” below). Attending a conference can be exhilarating, a must for anyone involved in the performing arts. Let’s get started with performing arts conferences in Canada:

The conference acts as a hub for conversations that have occurred throughout the calendar year and offers much opportunity for new discussion, debate and collaboration.
Personal Reflections

WARNING: I am including this section because I have often been asked what a conference is like and I wanted to give my opinion. Conferences have their own “personality” and a conference which is good for one attendee, or for one purpose, may not suit another attendee or purpose. So, please read these VERY subjective comments with a grain of salt. And remember, the only way to know a conference is to attend a conference.

National Conferences

CAPACOA: I have not been to many CAPACOA conferences. I was told by colleagues who had attended before I did, that it was a very “clique-y” conference and that it would take some time to become one of the clique. When I did attend I found that most of the networking took place outside of the exhibit hall (it was hardly visited whenever I exhibited), usually at a bar. Since I am not a great drinker of beer or alcoholic beverages, I was not as much interested in networking in this way. But it is a well-run conference and it has moved around the country in recent years. If you want to connect with some of Canada’s largest presenters, then it is certainly worth attending.

CINARS: I have never attended CINARS for various reasons. If you want to connect with international artists and presenters, and experience the French-Canadian culture, this would be a good one to attend.

Regional Conferences

Alberta Showcase: The provincial showcases in Alberta are small-scale but for showcasing artists they can result in block-booking tours of the province (if you are able to drive long distances). The fees are lower, but the opportunity for sales of merchandise is higher and a provincial tour can be quite a success for an artist. Be warned though, travelling in a Canadian winter is not for the faint of heart and most tours are arranged for times when weather is a factor.
Bourse Rideau: I have never been, but my Quebec colleagues assure me that not speaking French should not be an impediment to attending. The Quebec market is significant and attending this conference could open up a whole new territory or enhance programming.

Breakout West: A conference for emerging and mainstream artists in popular genres.

Contact East: Never been, but this is one of three regional conferences which I would recommend highly. If you’ve never been to Eastern Canada, go!

Contact Ontarois: Never been, but was surprised to find out that it is a larger contact than Ontario Contact, which I had thought was Ontario’s largest performing arts conference. The focus is primarily Francophone but the arts are an international language and this conference should be considered.

ECMA: This is a great conference. It features musicians from “down east”- Canada’s Maritime Provinces - and you’ll come away with an appreciation of “kitchen concerts” and the rich heritage of music from this part of Canada, as well as attending a very fine conference.

Manitoba Showcase: See Alberta Showcase

Ontario Contact: One of my favourite Canadian conferences. It is well-run under Cheryl Ewing’s leadership and it gives access to presenting venues - small, medium and large - in Canada’s largest population centres.

OSAC: See Alberta Showcase

Pacific Contact: Never made it to one of these but thought, if I ever had one of my artists showcasing there, I would have to go. It turned out that the fees my artists were asking were too high for the British Columbia market, so it never happened. Many of my colleagues have reported good things about this conference and it is highly recommended, along with Contact East and Ontario Contact.

Showcase PEI: Never been but PEI is a must-see.
Blues Summit: Never been, but if you’re a blues musician, this is for you.

CAFE: I have attended this conference several times and it is good for connecting with the larger fair and exhibition venues. Canada has several large events like the Canadian National Exhibition (CNE), Pacific National Exhibition (PNE) and Western Fairs and if you have a performance suitable for these events, then this is one to attend.

CCMA: Never been because my country & western artists never showcased there (See Pacific Contact above). If you like both kinds of music (country & western), or perform in this genre, try this conference.

CDA: Never been but a good way to connect with Canada’s dance community.

COCA: I entered the agency business later in life after several previous careers and I specialized in established artists for my roster, so I never really had any artists suitable for COCA. If you are a young artist or an agent with young artists on your roster, or a manager of a young artist, or a presenter from a college or university, this is the conference to attend. It is a scaled-down version of NACA or APCA.

CMW: A very large event in Toronto every year with a lot of bands performing. I never connected with this conference but could see its use for some artists/managers/presenters.

Festivals and Events Ontario: I served on the Festival and Events Ontario Board of Directors for many years and always liked this conference. It was a way of connecting with the multitude of festivals that occur every year, mainly in Ontario, but also throughout the country. Festivals provide many performance opportunities and their themes are extremely diverse. One of my favourite personal activities is yearly attendance at the Alliston Potato Festival which features a number of performances from street buskers to outdoor stages, to indoor venues.

Folk Music Ontario: I attended one, but only as a speaker. My impression of folk music festivals is that they provide a valuable service to folk musicians who love what they do but have a difficult time doing it and making a living. Fees in the folk music world are generally very low.

NXNE: See CMW above.

OAAS: I love this conference. It is a small conference, and the exhibit hall is held for one day only, but what a day! The exhibit hall is busy from morning to early evening and the attendees come to your booth and want to know what you can offer them. They have several showcases, especially children’s artists and a lovely auction of items from around the province. The fees at most Ontario fairs are not large but the people are wonderfully friendly and merchandise sales help the artist.

PACT: Never been but would definitely go if I represented theatre. I know some of the people at PACT and they are well-respected and their conference is an important factor in Canadian theatre life.

So, there you have it. Don’t take my word on any of these conferences. Go, explore, experience.

How to Prepare for a Conference

1. A conference should be part of your overall career plan and each conference you attend should be a part of this plan. When I wanted to expand my business from Canada into the United States, I started with a conference in the north eastern part of the United States – NEPAC (now defunct). It was the closest conference geographically to me and so it made sense economically. I exhibited there and had artists showcasing there and over the ensuing years I gradually expanded my reach into the United States until I was attending selected national, regional, state and specialized conferences which fit into my expansion plans and my artist roster.
2. Do some pre-conference research: go through each email you receive about the conference and any printed material the conference sends you. Know what the conference schedule is and make a tentative plan for your time at the conference. You may also have time to explore the city/area in which the conference takes place.

3. Find out who the main speakers are and get some information on them. Connecting with industry leaders is a good strategy.

4. Check the attendees list (if available) and determine with whom you’d like to connect. You can certainly send out emails (or postcards, etc.) but be aware that right before a conference attendees are inundated with materials and emails and most of them end up in the garbage or recycle bin. It is much better to build up a relationship over time and then the conference can be an opportunity to connect with someone with whom you already have a relationship.

5. Register early for the conference to take advantage of any discounts offered for early-bird registration. And reserve your flights in plenty of time if you’re flying to a conference.

6. Plan on staying at the conference hotel. This will allow you to network most effectively. There is usually cheaper accommodation available but it is often at a distance and entails transportation costs and just getting back and forth will increase your level of fatigue.

7. Find out what the weather will be like at the conference location and bring suitable clothing with you. It’s always a good idea to take along something dressy for a closing party or an off-site event.

9. You may want to bring headache or upset stomach medications, water, and workout clothes/running shoes for the Fitness Center. (Don’t forget your phone charger).
10. Bring materials for taking notes and keeping track of the connections you make.

11. Bring information such as a brochure on your venue (presenters) or artist one-sheets, roster listings, press kits, etc. (agents, managers).

How to Work a Conference

The goals of attending a conference should be learning and connecting. There are a multitude of opportunities at every conference to learn: keynote speakers, panels, roundtable sessions, workshops, etc. Attend as many events as you can and increase your knowledge of the performing arts field. Conferences are all about networking as well. The connections you make at a conference can lead to more and better business opportunities and life-long friendships.

1. Plan on taking as active a part in the conference as possible. Be a volunteer. Be a mentor. At every conference I attended, I volunteered to assist with Professional Development sessions, helping to hand out materials and evaluation forms at the door. I got to meet a lot of people and became a fixture at each conference. I also enjoyed mentoring at conferences – helping newbies negotiate a conference and achieving their goals.

2. Have goals in mind for attending the conference. You have to choose your activities with these goals in mind. Are you hoping to acquire representation? (Identify those agents/managers with whom you would have a rapport and fit into their roster. But remember that they are unlikely to have time for you at the conference. Contact them later.) Get booked in certain geographical areas? (Identify venues from a certain part of the country. Investigate the possibility of block-booking with them.) At certain venues? (Find out all you can about the venue – background, history, age, mission, achievements, staff, etc. and demonstrate your interest and knowledge in discussions with the venues’ representatives.) Increase your knowledge of a particular part of the industry? (Choose which professional development sessions will be of most use to you.) Plan accordingly.
3. Have real conversations with people. Don’t just promote yourself or hand out materials or business cards without first of all making a real connection. Ask meaningful questions and listen to the answers. Maintain eye contact, relax, and let them do the talking. People remember people who are interested in them and what they do as opposed to people who only talk about themselves. Showing that you are interested in the other person is the start of a beautiful friendship.

4. Remember that opportunities to connect can take place at social events as well. Plan on attending as many of the conference’s events as possible, including meals or other events which may require additional expense. Connecting with people will take place not only in the exhibit hall, but in the elevators, at showcases, in the bar, in the hotel lobby, on a bus, at a professional development session, during a social event, etc.

5. Keep track of the people with whom you connect. Try to exchange business cards and, at the first opportunity, record the gist of your conversations, or how you will follow up this connection.

6. Dress according to your style and the norms for the conference. Some people feel that business attire is de rigueur for agents or manager, while presenters may be dressed according to their normal mode of dress, be it casual or otherwise. Artists often dress “artistically.” In any case, you should dress so as to make a good first impression.

7. Conferences days are extremely busy and usually packed from early morning to late at night. If you are staying at the conference hotel, you can retreat to your room periodically to refresh yourself. Be sure to bring a supply of breath mints, make-up items, etc. to keep you fresh throughout the day.

8. Have a prepared “elevator speech” ready. Everyone is rushed at a conference and will expect, in 25 words or less essentially, to find out who you are, what you do and why they should continue the conversation with you. Listen carefully to how they respond, since it may provide you with an opening to carry on the conversation.

9. When you attend professional development sessions of any kind, take an active part. Ask questions and/or contribute to the session in a positive way.

10. Wear your name tag or ID badge properly, so that it can be seen at all times, especially when you are seated at a dining table. Wear it high and wear it proud!

Follow-up

1. Send an email to everyone with whom you connected at the conference. Remind them of your conversation and detail if you are sending them information or materials by mail or courier. If appropriate, share your knowledge and experience with them.

2. Use social media to connect with people and/or to report on your experiences at the conference (you could do this during the conference as well.) Name names and make positive comments.

3. Stay in touch by phone or email after the conference. It can sometimes take years before the right opportunity arises for you and your connection to make something happen. People change job positions frequently these days and that connection you made a while back may now be in a position to assist your career goals.

Final Thoughts

Once you’ve attended a conference, you will have a much better idea of its value for you. You may decide that a conference is not an annual event, but should be on your agenda every second or third year. You may find a conference with which you’d like to be more involved (Serve on its Board, contribute to a professional development session, etc.). Conferences should be an important part of your professional life. Go. Experience.
